Realistic life coaching: In a few short words let me just say that accepting when we fall of track in life, although deep within us we know which changes we need to implement to achieve the desired outcome we don't always achieve what we need to achieve possibly because we are unconnected from our self-worth." In my work as a life coach I aspire to support and I have successfully supported people to find within themselves the confidence to be their unique self, commit to working together and make their own informed decisions to make those changes which empower them to achieve their desired outcome. Examples: Rebuilding confidence, improved holistic wellbeing, personal development, career changes to name but a few.
